

New! Online Orientation Module To TSNs Transition Resources

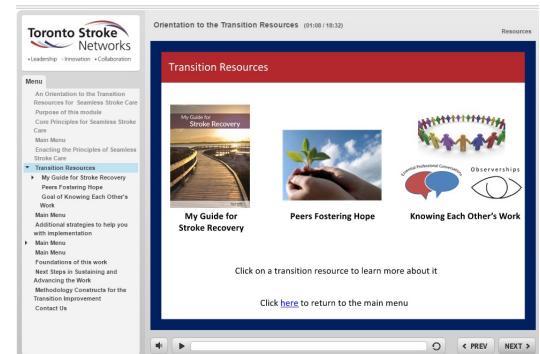

OCTOBER 2016

New! TSNs Transition Resources E-Learning Module

Since 2010 health service providers in the Toronto Stroke Networks (TSNs) have had an interest in improving the quality of care and experience through transitions and recovery for individuals and families affected by stroke. Based on input from persons with stroke, their families/caregivers and clinicians from a spectrum of care settings, resources were developed to address common concerns and service gaps in our system.

These resources include

- ◆ My Guide for Stroke Recovery
- ◆ Peers Fostering Hope
- ◆ Knowing Each Other's Work: Essential Professional Conversations
- ◆ Knowing Each Other's Work: Stroke Care Observerships

These resources are growing in their use across the TSNs and are having a positive effect on patient experience and provide opportunity for providers to deliver more flexible and individualized stroke care.

If you are new to the Toronto Stroke Networks, stroke care, or you would simply like a refresher, you can learn more about these resources and how to implement them. In under 30 minutes you can self-direct your own learning through our new online module that can be found on the TSN's Virtual Community of Practice and the TSNs website

The module will provide an overview of each resource and available tools to support implementation. You'll also discover what changes have been noticed in the system since implementing these resources in Toronto. Additional context outlining the background, rationale and methodology used in the original development of the resources is also included.

Let's help make our transition approach a standard of care in our system!

To link to the to the e-learning module click here or access it on the VCoP under the Member Resources section - TSNs Resources and Communiques.

